The Australian Press awards were introduced by members of the Victorian media when the NSI started in 1877. NSW, south Australian and Queensland pressmen joined in fater.

What about homeless?

Among the 40,000 earthquake victims who still live in emergency camps dotted around Mexico City, bitterness is expressed over expenditure lavished on the World Cup.

Juan Villegas, who lives in a small tent in a city-run settlement, said: "What do the authorities care about us homeless? They just want to improve their image."

But government officials deny claims by homeless self-help organisations that official funds planned for earthquake aid have been diverted to image building during the tournament.
The government's debt negotiators, playing for real in talks on more generous repayment terms on Mexico's $140 billion foreign debt, say they will not waste a month watching, soccer on television.

At the time it was 6-0 and the Spanish players protested furiously to Brambridge who was unmoved. Seconds later, Bambridge's eagle eye spotted a handball offence by Edinho, so he disallowed a Brazil goal Bambridge in fact, turned in a fine display and kept a tight relia on a match which could have got out of hand, given the hot-headed temperament of some of the players on the pitch.

He handed out just two yellow cards — to Spain's Julio Alberto and Brazil's Branco—and for a few minutes after disallowing the goal was careful not to let the anger of the Spaniards be translated into vicious fouls.

The goal that decided the Issue came in the $7rd miaute, not long after Michel's disallewed goal. A superb Brazillain interpassing movement freed Careca on the right of the Spanish area. His ferce drive left goalkeeper Zubizaretta floundering. The ball struck the underside of the bar and the elegant Socra-

Angry Miguel Munoz, the Spanish manager, blamed Bambridge for costling his team match.

Munoz stormed. "It was clearly a goal. The ball crossed the line, If it had been allowed there is no way we would have lost."

Santana insisted that even if Spain's goal had been allowed it would have made no difference to the result.

"We would just have gone on and stored two goals instead of one." he said.

Both teams complained of the torrid heat in the almost packed Jalisco Stadium. Socrates admitted afterwards that he found it difficult to breath the found it difficult to breath and Junior, such a driving force in middled, came off exhausted 12 minutes before the end.

It remains to be seen whether the 1886 World Cup finals will be remembered for the quality of the football but the tournament promises to be the biggest sports extravanganza ever mounted.

An estimated television audience of 10 billion — more than twice the world population—will sit through the first 51 games and over one billion will tune into the final on June 28.

The worldwide interest is in stark contrast with the early days of the World Cup which was the brain-child of Frenchman Joles Rimet, president of FIFA from 1820-54 and after whom the original trophy was named.

That solid gold Jules Rimet Cup is now the proper-ty of Brazil, winner in 1958-62-78, and the 24 1986 finalists are competing for what is simply called the FIFA World Cup, currently in the possession of Italy. Hopefully, the likes of Maradona, Platini and Zico will provide mements to treasure because the previ-ous 12 finals are rich in the folklore of football.

URUGUAY 1930

Just 13 countries decided to enter the inaugural tournament, which was eventually won by the host nation.

The four Europeans — Belgium, Romania, Yugoslavia and France — travelled to South America on the same ship — the journey took two weeks — and courteously called into Rio de Janeiro to plek up the Brazilians.

On Sunday July 13, France and Mexico had the honor of staging the first-ever World Cup tie, the French winning 4-1.

But it was the final on July 30 between Uruguay and near-neighbors Argentina which assured the World Cup of an honored place on the sports calendar.

Argentina won the toss for the choice of ball in the victory after trailing 2-1 at the interval.

The Uruguayan embassy in Buenos Aires was stoned the following day . . . but the World Cup was here to stay.

ITALY 1934 For the only time, the holder refused to defend the trophy and the host again tri-umphed in a 17-nation knockout tournament, much to the delight of Benito Mussolini.

The now-accepted format of first-phase groups has its critics but Argentina and Brazil were extremely disenchanted after travelling 13,000 km for Argentina was beaten 3-2 by Sweden while Brazil lost 3-1 to Spain in the first round. Mexico did not even make it into the competition proper—it was beaten by the United States in a playoff or the 16th place in the draw.

Italy and Crechoslovakia met in the final in front of a crowd of 55,000 in Rome and the Czechoslovaki led 1-0 until eight minutes from time.

Then Italian forward Orsi—one of three Argentines in the side—equalised with a freakish lob which curied over the head of goalkeeper Planicka and Schlavlo secored again in extra time to give Italy the first of its three titles.

The next day, Orsi tried to repeat his effort for the benefit of photographers—but gave up after 20 attempts.

Austria qualified but withdrew — though some of its star players appeared in the colors of Germany — Spain was ravaged by civil war, Argentina pulled out when it failed in its bid to host the finals and Uruguay again stayed away.

Brazil and Poland combined to produce one of the all-time great World Cup ties in Strasbourg, the South Americans winning §-5 after extra-time thanks to four goals from striker Leonidas — who played barefoot for a spell.

Colaussi and Piola scored two goals apiece as Italy beat Hungary 4.2 in the final in Paris and the trophy would remain in Europe for 12 years.

At the outbreak of World War II, Jules Rimet reclaimed the cup from the Italian FA and it remained under his bed until peace returned to Europe.

BRAZIL 1950

under his bed until peace returned to Europe. BRAZIL 1950
Against all the odds, Uruguay became champion for the second time when it beat the host in what is remembered as "The final which was not a final".

There were other talking points... the United States, whose only ambition was to avoid "a cricket score", beat England 1-0 in Belo Horizonte... and Sweden's amateurs beat Italy 3-2 in Sao Paulo. Eight of the Swedes promptly found themselves playing in the Italian first division the following season.

But it was the unusual format which provided the controversy.

But it was the unusual format which provided the controversy.
Uruguay, Brazil, Sweden and Spain qualified to meet in a min-league play-off and the hosts, with the devastating front three of Zizinho, Ademir and Jair, started brilliantly by beating the two Europeans 7-1 and 6-1 respectively.
Brazil needed only a draw against Uruguay to collect the trophy for the first time but its attack-minded side left gaping holes in defence and the Uruguayans won 2-1 to join Italy as double winners.
SWITZERLAND 1956.

SWITZERLAND 1954
If Uruguay's success was unexpected, West
Germany's triumph was a sensation.
Hungary arrived in Switzerland with one of the most dazzling line-ups ever assembled, including Puskas, Bozsik, Kocsis and Hidegkuti.
The Hungarians were reigning Olympic champions, were unbeaten in their last 28 internationalis and had humiliated England 6-3 at Wembley and 7-1 in Budapest.

and had humiliated England 6-3 at Wembley and 7-1 in Budapest.

Everything went according to the script at the start of the tournament. Korea was annihilated 8-9 and West Germany was dispatched 8-3 in the first phase group matches.

But the first hint that all was not well in the Hungary camp arese in the quarter-finals when the usually well-disciplined Hungarians became involved in the infamous "Battle of Berne" with Brazil.

Bozsik and Brazilians Nilton Santos and Tozzi were sent off during disgraceful scenes on the pitch and the fighting continued in the dressing rooms after the final whistic.

Despite its earlier humiliation, West Germany recovered its composure to join Hungary in the final in Berne, although the Germans must have felt a sense of deja vu when Puskas and Csibor scored within the first seven minutes.

But in an astonishing turnaround, West Germany went on to win 3-2, winger Helmut Rahn emerging as the hero of the hour with two goals.

when to to wins 2, whigh relimination that the guiges the hero of the hour with two goals.

SWEDEN 1958

Brazil finally won the trophy and gave the world its first glimpse of a 17-year-old phenomenon called Pele.

He burst into the headlines when he scored the only goal against Wales in the quarter-finals, collected a hat-trick in the 5-2 defeat of France in the next round, and added two more against Sweden in the final - which also ended 5-2.

Brazil's triumph was salt in the wounds of Argentine Ians, however, and thousands turned up at Buenes Aires airport to pelt their team with rotten tomatoes, fruit and stones following heavy defeats against West Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Although Frenchman Juste Fontaine scored 13 goals in Sweden, a record which still stands, Pele was the King of Football and his reign would last — on and off — for 12 wonderful years.

CHILE 1962

on and off — for 12 wonderful years.

CHILE 1962

Like Mexico in 1986, Chile had to stage the 1962 World Cup finals after a series of devastating earthquakes and its courage was rewarded when it went on to finish third.

Brazil triumphed again — but without Pele this time. The great man scored in the opening game against Mexico but limped out of the tournament when he tore a muscle in the second group match against Cerchoslovakia.

Even without Pele, Brazil was a joy to behold and his replacement Amarildo scored both goals in the 2-1 win over Spaln in the next game . . . Pele was so pleased he leapt into the team bath fully clothed to congratulate his understudy after the game.

The Czechoslovaks, inspired by their legendary halfback line (they still had such things 24 years ago) of Pluskal, Masopust and Populhar, also made it to the final in Santiago.

As against Italy in 1934, Csechoslovakia took the lead but was then let down by an uncharacteristic display from goalkeeper Schroif.

He was badly out of position when Amarildo equalised from an acute angle at the near post and was at fault again when he lost sight of the ball in the sun and allowed Vava to score the decisive third goal.

ENGLAND 1966

Another victory for a host nation — though for a time it appeared there would be no cup for a time it appeared there would be no cup to present.

The Jules Rimet frophy was stolen while on display in London and a massive police search proved fruitless. It was eventually found by a collie dog called Pickles, who pawed it out from under a bush in a park. Pickles' owner received a Stgs,000 (currently $A12,623) reward and the thief, who had demanded Stg15,000 (currently $A31,559), received a two-year jail sentence.

Brazil's hopes of the hat-trick disintegrated in its first match when Pele hobble off the pitch draped in a blanket, a bruised and battered victim of the Bulgarian delenee.

The hosts, with three players of genuine world class in goalteeper Gordon Banks, defender Bobby Moore and midfielder Bobby Charlton won a thrilling final against West Germany at Wembley where striker Geoff Hurst put his name in the record book with a hat-trick in the 4-2 extra-time victory.

But it was North Korea that won the hearts of the fans. It beat a much-vaunted Italian line-up 1-0 to reach the quarter-finals and actually led Portugal 3-0 in the first half before Eusebic launched a one-man demolition job of the North Korean defence by scoring four of his side's five goals.

MEXICO 1970

MEXICO 1970 MEXICU 1970
Despite vowing never to play in another World Cup, Pele was back — better than ever — as Brazil won the Jules Rimet trophy outright by becoming champions for the third time.
Coldoaldo, Gerson and Rivelino were a "dream indifield while Pele had two notable lieutenants in Tostao and Jairzinho, who scored in every match, in attack.

Italy reached the final courtesy of a nerve-jangling victory over West Germany in the semi finals where it emerged 4-3 winner in extra-time.
West Germany was undoubtedly exhausted by its efforts in the previous round when it came from 2-0 down to beat England 3-2.
The final in the Aztec Stadium was a 99-minute football fiesta as the magical Brazilians teased and tormented the normally redoubtable Italian

Pele headed Brazil in front . . . Roberto Boninsegna equalised . . . and that was the cue for the Brazilians to unleash their Iuli attacking power as

WEST GERMANY 1974

The West Germans followed the path of Uruguay (1930), Italy (1934) and England (1966) by taking full advantage of playing on home soil to collect the new FIFA World Cup.

nome soil to collect the new FIFA world cup. With Brazil a cruel caricature of its 1370 team, the Netherlands assumed the role of entertainers and if Pele was no longer around to delight the eye, there was Johan Cruyff. That the "European Brazilians" failed in the final, was due almost entirely to the incomparable Gerd Mouller was due almost entirely to the incomparable Gerd Meuller.

The Dutch had been in thrilling form throughout the tournament, particularly in their 4-9 and 2-0 de-leats of Argentina and Brazil, and they began the final in dazzling form.

Just three minutes into the game, Gruyff set off on a mesmerising solo run and when he was pulled down, Johan Neeskens cooly netted from the penalty soot.

down, Johan Neeskens cooly netted from the penalty Spot.

For the next 30 minutes, the Dutchmen were the complete masters as the West Germans tried to cope with their flowing and inventive football.

I ronically, the goal came at the other end. Paul Breitner was felled in the box as he weaved in on goal and the second penalty of the match put the West Germans level.

Two minutes before the interval, Mueller, "Der Bomber", struck a typical goal from close in — his 68th and most important in internationals.

ARGENTINA 1978

A wave of national hysteria carried Argentina to triumph, though for the second successive time the Netherlands were arguably the best team in the tournament despite the absence of Cruyff.

Argentina, outplayed by Italy in a first phase group match which it lost 0-1, squeezed into the final on goal difference at the expense of Brazil thanks to a 6-0 victory over the inept Peruvians.

But the Argentina is did have outstanding players

But the Argentinians did have outstanding players in Mario Kempes, Daniel Passarella and Osvaldo Ardiles.

Before the kickoff to the final Argentine captain Passarella objected to a light plaster Dutch mid-fielder Rene van de Kerkhof was wearing on his hand to protect an injured bone.

After a long harangue, Italian referee Sergio Gordila finally persuaded van de Kerkhof to remove the "offending" plaster and the game got underway 30 minutes late.

Kempes shot Argentina ahead but the Dutch gradually took control and Dick Naninga duly equalised. Argentina lound new heights in extra-time, however, and Kempes and Daniel Bertoni earned a 3-1 victory.

SPAIN 1982

ed third success and this time the world wept with Brazil.
With Zico, Socrates and Falcao choreographing a soccer ballet in every game, the Brazilians went into their final group game against Italy needing only a draw to reach the final.
Instead, it was the rejuvenated Italians who ran out 32 winners with Paulo Rossi netting a hat-frick. Without doubt Italy deserved to with that game. . but Brazil deserved the World Cup.
Italy's final opponent in Madrid was West Germany, which had made an unsatisfactory journey through the first two phases.
A cynical 1-0 goal win over Austria in the first round allowed both teams to go through on goal difference and it took a nerve-tingling penalty shootout to dispose of France in a wonderful game in Seville — marred only by a horrific foul on Patrick Batiston by West German goalkeeper Toni Schumacher.

With all the hoo-ha over the heat and the altitude in Mexico, and the obscenity of 35 of the 52 matches kicking off at high noon, I can see political mileage being gained by some here in Australia.

Let me head them off, if such boring rhetoric hasn't been fed to you already, that World Cup soccer in Mexico, in the noon-day sun and up to 2,680 metres above sea level, has nothing whatever to do with the "summer soccer" idea as mooted in Australia. (And I loathe to bore you by pointing out the differences except to say that, in a nutshell, the Australian proposal on Australian soccer. He said it is being played super-fast but the ball remains super-slow, which means players work their butts off, do-ing everything at a mil-lion miles an hour, but lack the skill to make an accurate pass.

So what we have is a mad rush where the game appears to be played fast but in fact it takes ages for the ball to be played from one end of the field to the other.

It all adds up to a 90-minute maze where the attacker has no time to

That was the reason for the montage of violence we saw in round eight of the NSL when six play-ers were sent off. I was particularly pleased at the NSL's reaction to that violence. There were warnings about a clamp-down on the thuggery and, at last, even the idea of compe-tition points being de-ducted as punishment for offending clubs was

But, looking at the World Cup and the type of soccer being played there, I have another suggestion for curbing violent play: summer soccer.

I mean, have an administration that is manifestly vigilant in its policing of violent football and team that up with summer soccer where teams would be forced to curb the lunatic speed with which they play their games and, boy oh boy, we could even get decent soccer in this country. Marketing spite its failure to add the scalp of Adelaide Hellas to those of Green Gully and South Melbourne.

Croydon coach Peter Ollerton approached this cupite with the ideal attitude. We have nothing to lose, because nobody expects us to was that devilengy care attitude that brought joy to the spectators in the form of fast, all-action football. front in the 14th minute as he latched onto a finely weighted, left flank cross from Alex Livingstone to beat Maryn Crook in the Heilas goal. John Panagis, Gary Price and Steve Papadopoulos worked hard to compensate for the loss of cup-lied Gary Ward. Their efforts were rewarded in the 31st minute as Captain Graham Honeyman scored from a goalmouth scrimmage after Alan Scott had floated in a free kick.

Croydon's best chance to regain its earlier advantage came in the 64th minute when David Brogan hit the crossbar with a left foot drive off a Jim Tansey free kick.

With extra-time looming, George Konstandopoulos produced the spark of ge-nius which shoved Hellas into the semi-finals of the rick knock-out Cup.

Konstandopoulos has scored similar goals in the past. One notable one was against Adelaide City Juventus recently.

This time he gathered a ball which Blasby partially cleared to plvot on the edge of the box and scoop the ball high into the net. As Victorian State League champion of 1985, Croydon City was a worth entrant in the Nanda Cup.

It proved in this Cup series that it would have been more than capable of holding its own on the playing field in the NSL had it not declined the offer to enter.

While the Queenslanders shone, a few NSW players were found wanting. The midfield of Raskopoulos, Tredinnick and Arnold was abysmal. Arnold showed the only penetration and there was not a player among the three willing to match the Queenslander's work-rate. And the mobility of Coo-per and Wright, coupled with the endless sideline runs of Ogden and Morton and the perpetual dynamo of the Stewart brothers never gave NSW a look in.

Queensland had no less than five good scoring op-portunities in the first 29 minutes. Sadly, Danny Wright, who had been in such good touch of late, lost his compass and shot wide.

It could well have cost him a Socceroo chance, as Eddie Thomson, in Bris-bane to scout on Frank Arok's behalf, highlighted

But Thomson was full of praise for Jackson and Ogden.

"I liked the boy Ogden; he went very well," Thomson said. And of Jackson he re-plied: "We would lose noth-ing by having a look at him."

Although the Stewart brothers are, along with Wright, part of the Mel-bourne Socceroo Training Camp, their tenure in the national squad could be limited.

"We have had John and Russell Stewart pushed down our throats by Queensland, so we have giv-en them a go. While they are good club players and played well for Queensland, they are lacking that some-thing extra needed for na-tional players.

"They certainly aren't any better than what we have now."

Hillmen to fly high, McCarthy at Melbourne By CRAIG MACKENZIE goes to Wembley Park on Sunday to face a crucial test in its quest for its first ever State League championship against a Box Hill team now firmly on the road into the top

Diamo still will be without injured striker Kevin Lloyd and over the next month four Diamo players — Ante Kustura, Dennis Morovic, Ned Batinovic and Darko Kolaric — head off on overseas trips. That seriously will diminish the quality and depth of coach Tony Virian's first team squad. In fact, I'll go as far as predicting that their absence will stop Dinamo winning the title. The picture is far rosier at Box Hill, even though Dinamo is three points ahead of the Hillmen.

Box Hill's Scottish import,

Box Hill, even though Dinamo is three points ahead of the Hillmen is three points ahead of the Hillmen Box Hill's Scottish import, striker Laurie McKinna, has settled in quickly and looked a fine player against Springvale last weekend. So too did his atlacking partner Phil Griffin, who has shrugged of his injury problems. Their partnership, with the attacking capabilities of either George Gagic or Dave Azzopardi out wide, has given Box Hill the bite it needed up front and I expect the Hillmen to account for Dinamo here. Dean Hennessy is in great form. He's been playing in a central defensive role due to the absence of injured Andy McMillan. What I liked about Hennessy against Springvale was the way he broke forward, particularly in the first half. It's so refreshing to see central defenders in State League with young Hennessy's skill on the ball.

Two clubs in turmoli — Polonia and Croydon — clash at Raleigh Reserve on Sunday and with Andy Humble, Grahm French and Dave Brogan up front, Craydon should win. Scorer: Storm 8th. 38th. Venue: Partridge Reserve, Sunday.

Ringwood Wilhelmina's new coach Tom Kelly got off to a flying start against a Thomastown team that lacked effort and imagination and The mastown fans didn't hide their feelings when Nino Di Martino was replaced by Brian Flaherty in the cond half.

Alan Kerr also was on the Wilhelmina thoroughly de-served what was to be a match-winning 2-0 halftlme lead.

Andy Higgins had a night-mare in front of goal and will want to forget this match in a hurry. In the 5th minute, after a good run by Brian Coyle, Higgins overran the ball when he was right in front of the Witherlina goal and a minute later, from a goalmouth scramble. Higgins 'mistimed shot was blocked on the line.

Withdrains hit the front in Wilhelmina hit the front in the 8th minute. Paul Corke played a free kick high and long into the Thomastown area. Mauro Raponi charged out of goal but Kees Storm got to the ball first and headed into the empty net.

In the 20th minute a long prow-in put Higgins in posses-on. He mistimed his shot and George McMillan struck the ball over from five metres.

In the 26th minute Di Mar-tino made a good run down the right. His fine cross picked out Higgins who was unmarked and under no pres-sure whatsoever yet still managed to head wide.

Higgins did get the ball into the Wilhelmina net shortly after only to be ruled offside and the game was put out of Thomastown's reach in the 38th minute.

Corke played the ball long to Nijholt whose superb flick with the outside of his boot sent the outside of his boot sent storm through. Storm, without changing strike, knocked the ball forward with his first touch and with his second sent a delicate chip over the head of Raponi to make it 2-0. It was a good a good as you could wish to see.

Withburing mode cure to do.

Wilhelmina made sure to de-fend in numbers in the second half but when it went forward it did so quickly.

The last 25 minutes however were the poorest I've seen this year. Frankly, a few Thomas-town players lacked heart. Rumor was rife as we went to press that Jim Tansey had been approached to replace Peter Ollerton as coach of Croydon and that the club had offered Jim MacLean for $18,000 to Melbourne Croatia. It seems that Croydon has decided to institute a youth policy, a move perhaps prompted by the club's debt and a move that could force a showdown between Ollerton and club president Michael Antolos.

"If Ollerton doesn't do it then I'll do it. I'm the boss, not him! I pay his wages," said Antolos. president Michael Antolos.
"If I stay as president of Croydon next year then adopting a youth policy is the only way to go. As part of that policy we pian to buy goalkeeper Corrado Nobile from Fawkner for $550 this week," said Antolos.

Antolos.
Ollerton reacted angrily when told of the new path the Club intends pursuing.
"If that's the case then he (Antolos) will have to confront me and tell me all about these new plans and if I don't like what I hear then I'll piss off," said Ollerton.

Mach near time in piss on, said Ollerton.

Box Hill should have beaten

The reason? Box Hill goalkeeper John McKinlay clearlywas impeded when trying to

Will that mean that some of the more established State League performers at Croydon will be put on the market?

"What do you think?" said Antolos.

Antolos.
"I'm not interested in winning championships if that means that we're going to lose the good young players at the club. We've got the best reserve team in State League, you know."

I put it to Antolos that Ollerton would reject such a policy after putting in so much work into signing the experienced players which brought the club its first ever State League championship last season.

Saturday.

Northcote has agreed terms with Kenny Drakeford and expected him to arrive from New Zealand as we went to press. Drakeford is likely to assume Juan Toro's playmaking role in midfield this weekend.

The display assint Mouvell.

This display against Morwell served to reinforce my view that Northcote can consolidate its State League status this season its State League status this season.

Falcons though, completely dominated the first half and could have gone in at the break with a five-goal lead. As it was, it led 2-0 at half time. But what a turnaround in the second half. In fact, Northcote was a bit unlucky not to sneak away with both points.

A low shot in the 2nd minute by Peter Verechia was tipped just wide by Northcote goalle John Gianopoulos and three minutes later Morwell was in front.

A bad backpass by George Kouremenos was put out for a corner to Morwell. Jim Trail took it, sending the ball long and deep. Ian Stirton, with his market Kouremenos nowhere in sight, charged in and headed home.

That penalised Northcote but it didn't stop its determined fightback and in the 60th minute a great long ball by George Gozikis sent Arthur Patinioits scooting past Jim Train on the right wing, Patinioits crossed hard and low and Patsaked's first time shot struck Alex Eacott on the chest. There was Bobby Toal, waiting for the rebound, and he struck the ball into the far corner to make it 2-1.

Goodonya, with one game in hand, is only one point off top spot after de-feating Makedonia.

Makedonia has held top spot for most of the season much to the frustration of its older opponents.

Consistency is its claim to fame as it methodically

Dennis Mahoney and David Camilleri provided the early scoring opportunities bagging a goal each. They were well supported by George Thalassuros,

The Furious Five now had the confidence to control the game, but the Eliminators furnbling with Bisetto building up fouls and getting his team into a no-wall situation, but a dedection off Giacomi saved the Eliminators from coceding another goal.

Soon after, Maurice Bisetto scored the Eliminators' first goal then it was Boin's turn to equalise aminute and a half before the break. Seconds before the end of the first half a burst by Theo Galatopolous saw Terzini save a brilliant shot.

As Soon as the second half commenced Tenace had a shot which hit the post. He latched onto the rebound and had a second shot which went in.

From the kick off, Ernie Boin scored for the Eliminators to make it 3-3.

All of this action happened in a matter of minutes then Muzi Eideh put the Furious Five in the lead again.

Twelve and a half minutes into the half Les Sitilidis had a shot which forced Terzini out of the area and seconds later a shot by Panagiotou regis-tered the fifth goal for the Five.

Fifteen minutes into the half and all is not lost for the Eliminators when Boin made it 5-4 and within minutes it was 5-5.

Being a semi final, extra time was played. Four minutes into time-on, Giacomi for the Eliminators scored. A second player for the Furious Five was given a blue card and asked to leave the field.

In the second half of time-on, Michael Panagio-tou scored for the Furious Five and penalties were taken.

The keepers were now put to the test and Terzini for the Eliminators came out on top with three saves compared to one by Hass Eideh.

This bagful of goals has already made him a clear leader in the race for top goalscorer honors. Canons played a mighty game to down the enthusiatic Shafters. Bonds, hope-ful of an easier game than the previous week, were the previous week, were thrashed by Riviera. Disciples, in their new League leaders Kaiser Chiefs hammered home 12 goals to send Calypsos tumbling.

Finally, the very cool Smooth Operators left the Red Devils floundering by defeating them 10-1.

Piontek has transformed Denmark, which used to be something of a music hall joke in Europe, into a serious World Cup, contender despite the problems of building a team whose players earn their daily wages in Italy, West Germany,

England, Belgium, Portugal and the Netherlands.

The West German modestly plays down his role. "We've been lucky because a group of very special players have all come through at the same time — just as happened with the Dutch in the 1970s."

Piontek, 45, who covers 60,000 km a year monitoring the form of his exiled internationals, is a self-confessed foot-

While Brazil, once considered the conscience of football, looks for "bandits," Piontek will flood his team with sheer talent.

Players of the calibre of Morten Olsen, Allan Simonsen, Morten Olsen, Alian Simonsen, Jesper Olsen and Jan Molby may still be relatively un-known outside Europe but by the end of the World Cup they just might have replaced Zlco and Socrates in the affection of the masses.
